Ethiopia Seeks More Food Aid

(AP) - Ethiopia has asked donor nations and relief agencies for around a million tons of emergency food sid for next year, the U.S. change d'affaires, James Cheek, said Tuesday. Some relief officials say that because of drought, harvests in some areas of Ethiopia could be as bad this year as in 1984, the first year of catastrophic drought and famine that by 1986 had killed an estimated 1 million people.

Mr. Cheek said diplomatic missions in Addis Ababa had received letters from the gov-ernment asking for 950,000 metric tons of food aid. Donors pledged 500,000 tons for 1987.

Iraq Ends 3-Day Lull In Gulf

Planes Attack 2 Targets Near Kharg Island

BAGHDAD - Iraq broke a three-day lull in attacks on Gulf shipping with an air strike Tuesday night on two "large naval targets," its term for oil tankers or merchant ships, a military spokesman said.

The spokesman said the aircraft had attacked the vessels at the waiting area east of Iran's main oil terminal at Kharg Island and had returned safely to base after scoring an "accurate and effective hit.". Iraq's last reported attacks had been against two vessels on Satur-day. Iran has not hit a shipping target since Friday, accordi shipping executives Information Minister Latif Nassif al-Jassem told a news conference that Iraq would hit Iranian oil and economic installations until Tehran accepted a United Nations Security Council resolution, adopted July 20, calling for a cease-fire in the Gulf war. The Iraqi attack put an end to expectations by diplomats in Bagh-dad that Iraq would hold off its raids on Iranian oil routes and shipping in the Gulf during an upcoming visit by the UN secretarygeneral, Javier Pérez de Cuéllar, to seek a truce implementing the UN

A UN spokesman said Mr. Pérez de Cuéllar had still not set the exact dates for the mission but expected to leave later this week.

Earlier, 12 Japanese or Japanes manned ships sailed into the Gulf, ending a five-day suspension of Japanese shipping.
The suspension began after a Japanese tanker was attacked last Wednesday, reportedly by Iran's Revolutionary Guards. Japanese seamen and shipowners lifted the suspension on Gulf shipping after contacts with Iranian and Iraqi diplomats to try to ensure the safety of their vessels. In Moscow, the Soviet Union and Iran joined in condemning the 'imperialist" U.S. presence in the Gulf and called for the removal of all foreign naval ships. The statement came during a meeting between the Soviet foreign minister, Eduard A. Shevardnadz and the Iranian deputy foreign minister, Mohammed Larijani. A Foreign Ministry spokesman, Gennadi L Gerasimov, said at a news conference that the meeting was of "major importance" to the Kremlin, a point emphasized by the high-level access given the rela-

Arab sources said. The delegation also included the Arab League's secretary-general, Chedli Klibi, and Iraq's foreign minister, Tariq Aziz. They were to meet Prime Minister Nikolai I. Ryzhkov and Mr. Shevardnadze on Wednesday.

Honecker and Kohl Disagree On Issues but Pledge Contacts

By Robert J. McCartney

BONN — The two Germanys pledged Tuesday to intensify bilat-eral contacts in fields ranging from travel to sports, but they achieved little on human rights or disarmament issues at the end of the official portion of Erich Honecker's landmark visit to West Germany. A joint communique, issued after more than 12 hours of talks between the East German leader and Chancellor Helmut Kohl, made clear that the meeting had lived up to its advance billing of being important primarily as a gesture of good will between the two

Mr. Honecker agreed to try to do more to make it easier for East Germans to travel to the West. The Communist government also eased restrictions slightly on imports of tapes and videocassettes.

a speech prepared for delivery at a dinner Tuesday night given by Mr. Honecker. "No one could have expected anything else."
Mr. Honecker, in his speech, said his visit had been "fruitful" so far. Both leaders, who maintained a wary reserve toward one another in their joint appearances, stuck days of the five-day visit.

Agreement was reached before the trip on most of the language in the communiqué, Mr. Kohl, as expected, accepted an invitation from Mr. Honecker to visit East Germany at a date to be specified later. The smoothness of the first part of the visit resulted largely from compromise on the terms of the uip, political observers said.

Bonn granted a major concession by receiving Mr. Honecker on published materials, recording Monday with nearly all the honors normally given to a foreign leader, even though West Germany offi-cially does not view East Germany as a foreign country.

Mr. Honecker agreed to the visit even though Bonn rebuffed East nort-range nuclear missiles.

Bonn officials and newspaper commentators said that it was "painful" to welcome the man who presided over construction of the Berlin Wall. But they said that it was necessary to do so, in order to gain influence with East Germany and contribute to an improvement in the lives of its citizens.

The Bonn government press office took the unusual step of an-nouncing that East Germany had agreed to allow imports of nonpo-litical published materials, such as technical or professional periodicals, and blank tapes.

Mr. Schänble said East Germany still would restrict imports of Western news publications.

The two leaders agreed to take unspecified steps to expand tourism and trade, share electrical power, improve inter-German railway travel, promote youth and sports exchanges and help reunite divided families, the communique said.

Mr. Kohl and Mr. Honecker had frank exchange of views" on Neither side indicated publicly that that there had been any progress toward changing East German border guards' orders to shoot people trying to cross the Berlin Wall or the frontier with West Germany.

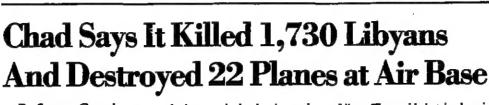

Both sides reaffirmed longstanding differences on nuclear and conventional disarmament.

State prosecutors ordered the arrest of Fikret Abdic, who was dismissed over the weekend as chief executive of Agrokomerc, for crimes that posed a "counter-revolutionary threat" to Yugoslavia's Socialist selfmanagement system, they said. The state-owned company issued up to $500 million worth of false promissory notes.

The arrest came after Mr. Abdic's immunity to prosecution as a member of parliament was waived by the Federal Assembly. Meanwh the official Tanjug news agency said banks affected by the scandal agree to sue Agrokomere to recover losses. Further charges also were brought Tuesday against the director of the company's internal bank, who is one of six officials already arrested in connection with the affair.

Spain, U.K. Fail to Agree on Air Fares

LONDON (Reuters) — A deal to make air travel cheaper in Western Europe remained grounded on Tuesday after Spain and Britain failed w reach agreement over how the deal should apply to Gibraltar, British

A Foreign Office spokesman said there was no breakthrough in daylong talks between senior officials of the two countries that focused on the status of the British colony's airport. Spain vetoed a package in June aimed at reducing air fares throughout the European Community because the deal treated the Gibraitar amount as British. The Spanish are seeking to share the sirport as a step toward against divided government is reassem-bling: The president returned on Sunday, and Congress reconvenes on Wednesday. There will be three weeks left until next fiscal year, for which none of the 13 regular appropriations bills has been passed; nor is any likely to be by the time the year begins. Government will once again have to be put on hold, in the form of a continuing resolution. But that is the least of it.

Next year's budget resolution was adopted in June. The appropriations bills are one of the avenues for carrying such resolutions out. Reconciliation bills, adjusting the programs not subject to the appropriations process, are the other. No reconciliation bill is in sight. The bill this year was supposed to contain the tax in-crease around which the budget resolution revolves. But the president has said he would veto a tax increase, so work on one has not begun; nor is it clear that it will.

Instead, in the guise of restoring and strengthening the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction process, the two houses are busily refighting and weakening the budget resolution, so that less deficit reducion will be required. The leader in this delicate maneuver is the same Senator Phil Gramm after whom the original process is named. The idea seems to be that if deficit reduction requires a tax increase, as surely it does, let the next president do it.

The problem is political. The Democrats have majorities, but the Republicans have the veto and the filibuster; particularly in

The world's greatest living argument votes to win. The defense authorization bill has been hung up in an arms control filibuster since May; a campaign finance reform bill has been similarly blocked since June. The Senate will shortly have to deal as well with the nomination of Judge Robert Bork to the Supreme Court; on this, the opposing Democrats have threatened to filibuster.

Behind these major tie-ups, other legislation languishes. A clean air deadline looms on Dec. 31; no action has been taken. The Farm Credit System is nearly bankrupt; so also is the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, but for neither is there yet a bill. Fair housing legislation has yet to emerge from the judiciary committees; a bill to reverse the Supreme Court's 1984 Grove City decision restricting the reach of the anti-discrimination laws has been reported by committee in the Senate but awarts time on the floor. Welfare reform is snarled by disputes over cost and philosophy in both houses; health insurance for catastrophic illnesses has passed the House, but in a form that has the Senate uncertain and the president threatening veto. The trade bills are so cumbersome that the House may appoint 140 conferees. In foreign affairs, there are possible fights ahead on both Central America (further aid to the contras) and the Middle East (arms for the Sandis, ships in the Gulf), as well as the continuing struggle over arms control.

But the budget remains at the heart of this. The president will not bend, and neither party in Congress seems quite to know what to do about it. The government is

Backward in Argentina

Argentine politics throughout this century has repeatedly been seized by a perverse and self-destructive impulse that has done the country immense harm. One of the bearers of that tradition is the Peronist movement - and unfortunately the Peronists are the chief winners in Sunday's election. They have taken most of the provincial governorships. And although President Raul Alfonsin's party continues to have more seats than any other in the national Chamber of Deputies, it no longer has the two-seat absolute majority that it commanded for the past two years.

It is not the pure arithmetic of seats lost that will undercut Mr. Alfonsin so much as the sense that his country is swinging away from rational and skillful leadership toward the darker and more adventurous alternatives that have always meant trouble.

Argentina's huge debts to foreign banks were generated largely by capital flight. The government borrowed desperately to keep its currency from collapsing in the years under the military juntas when wealthy Argentines were sending their money by the tens of billions of dollars to New York and London. The best and easiest way for Argentina to repay its debts and stabilize its economy is to attract that money back home. The chances of that are going to fall at the same rate at which the Peronists' fortunes rise. In Brazil, a weak government, trying to avoid the necessity for extensive economic reform, is now hunting for allies to join its moratorium on repaying foreign debts. If the Argentine government is immobilized and prevented from carrying out its own program of reforms now getting under way, the pressure on it to join a moratorium will rise. That is a shortcut to economic isolation and stagnation.

At the turn of the century, Argentina was one of the world's richest countries. Its GNP per capita was equal to that of the United States. The figure is now about onesixth the U.S. figure - a rare case of a country sliding rapidly backward down the scale of economic development. What happened? It was the result of missuided polities: the familiar mixture of fervid populism and nationalism represented in that big Peronist vote last weekend.

Nunn Makes His Point

trouble by reinterpreting the Antiballistic found that the secret record corresponded Missile Treaty to allow for "star wars" testing. Now Senator Sam Nunn threatens to oblige when the Senate considers an expected new treaty on medium-range missiles. The White House deserves the threatened kick, but it would be unfortunate for all concerned if matters came to that. The trouble started when the administration realized to its horror that the generally accepted interpretation of the ABM treaty would preclude most tests for President Reagan's space-based defense system. Indeed, it is extremely hard to read the treaty any other way, given the testimony of Nixon administration officials to the Senate in 1972. The Reagan administration turned to its lawyers and, mirabile dictu, they discovered that the Senate had been misled! In fact, their Nixon administration predecessors had misled themselves! If the details of the negotiating record were read right, the lawyers explained, virtually any kind of testing would be permissible short of actual deployment of a space-based system.

Congress was in no position to challenge this new interpretation because it had never been given the actual negotiating record. Nor would the administration now share that record with the Senate. Why, that would be too cumbersome and confusing, the Reagan administration insisted.

Mr. Nunn said he was willing to subject himself to such confusion. In fact, he insisted on it, and the White House relented. Far

The Reagan administration asked for from being confused, the Georgia Democrat with the public testimony. Both prohibit the testing of space-based systems. He provided a detailed public refutation of the administration's new interpretation. The administration countered with unconvincing legalisms

It seemed a typical Washington standoff - until Mr. Nunn carried the logic of the administration's position to its absurd end. All right, he said in a letter to the president, you say the Senate "cannot rely on the testimony of executive branch officials" in presenting a treaty. You say the Senate cannot understand a treaty properly without the tens of thousands of transcript pages, telegrams and memos involved in the enterprise. Well, if so, and if you want the Senate to approve a new missile treaty, you must provide the full record of talks with the Soviet Union on banning medium- and shorter-range missiles from Europe and Asia. It is a threat with real dangers, and not just of embarrassment for the White House. It was one thing for Mr. Nunn and his staff to study the ABM treaty record. To open any complicated legal document to the scrutiny of all 100 senators, with their conflicting ideological positions, would invite endless delays and hair-raising disputes.

It is up to the White House to avoid this nightmare. The best way for administration officials to protect the hoped for treaty on missiles is to abandon their legally sinful and dangerous new reading of the ABM treaty.

Honecker in West Germany

Reconciliation with East Germany is franght with great danger. All favors depend on the good will of the East German government, which in turn depends on the Soviet Union. It has therefore become very important to the West Germans not to upset the ns. This affects Bonn's attitude to questions as disparate as the imposition of martial law in Poland, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the American bombing of Libya and joint Western action against terrorallowed to come from the Soviet Union to West Germany, compared with only 753 in

Nouvelle Droite, Nazi-Maoists, Mullahs and a Lesson

By William Pfaff

PARIS — An unexpected but not illogical connection between European rightist extremism and the Ira-nian revolution has been revealed in the disclosure that the Iranian Embassy here has contributed funds to a rightist Paris bookstore and publisher.

The man at the center of the current diplomatic crisis between France and Iran is Wahid Gordji, officially the embassy's translator but a man French authorities consider a key to Iran's political-military operations in Enrope. It was Mr. Gordji who subsidized publication and distribution of 100,000 copies of the shop's catalog.

The works the bookshop offers include "The Jewish Myth of the Holocaust" and facsimiles of anti-Semitic works published in France during the Nazi occupation. But this is not a mere case of opportunistic collaboration in the slander of Israel and the Jews. Edwy Plenel of the newspaper Le Monde argues that there is a real part of the far right in Europe and the tenets of the Islamic revolution. But based on Mr. Plenel's own evidence, it seems less convergence than a conversion of these Europeans to a conception of the Islamic revolution that has more to do with the European rightists' views on race and national destiny than reality in Iran. What Mr. Plenel tells us diverges strikingly from the usual notion of the extreme right as racist, authoritarian and militaristic. That fits a part of the far right — the populist, chauvinist right. But there is also in Europe a

Democracy Spreads, Consensus Arrives

In the eyes of many, democracy seemed, 50 years ago, to be a symbol of impotence, a formula in danger of extinction. Today, thanks notably to a rise in living standards and to the development of education, it has never been more widespread. No longer is there fear that Germany. Italy, Spain, Greece or Portugal might return to dictatorship; it has been rolled back in Latin America, and now in Southeast Asia. And no one can deny that the Soviet Union is following China on the road to change.

France is no exception to the rule. Communism has become more bourgeois while at the same time moving nearer the fringe. On the other side, the National Front, to consolidate and amplify its electoral breakthrough, is speaking in terms more reminiscent of American populism than of the good old-fashioned extreme right. The truth is that the consensus among the French on their government and society has never been so great. — André Fontaine in Le Monde (Paris).

It is misleading to refer to the episode as the Cuban missile crisis. Mr. Khrushchev's gamble

And when people refer to the crisis they never link it to Project Mongoose. That was the Kennedy program to get rid of Fidel Castro.

The evidence is circumstantial, but I find it hard to believe that Project Mongoose did not influence the Cuban leader's decision to go along with Mr. Khrushchev on deploying missiles to Cuba. In 1962, Mr. Khrushchev found himself in an right, whose members are drawn not only to Iran's revolution but to the terrorism of the Red Brigades.

These people have enemies in com-mon with Iran and with the terrorist left: Israel certainly, and the United States, with the materialist, "monerel" civilization it represents, but also the "bourgeois society" of Western Europe. This amalgam (called "Nazi-Maoist" in Italy) brings neo-fascists together with elements from the "New New York". Right" in France and Belgium.

These people hold that European civilization is weak because it has been false to itself. It is corrupted by decadent American values, by Marxism and socialism. They want to see a new imperial Europe created to oppose both America and the Soviet Union.

They see men engaged in a biologi-cal competition for domination. They look on conflict as essential to human progress. The so-called Nouvelle Droite in France is particularly enam-ored of the idea of Europe as a warrior society descended from Aryan conquerors in antiquity, later corrupted by Christianity and infiltrated by lesser races. Does this sound familiar?

In other ways, the program of this extreme right is internationalist (it wants Europe united), revolutionary and elitist. Terrorists of the Red Brigades' ilk are looked on as allies; they attack the common enemies and express the same loathing for Europe's ignominious outcome. He wanted the Western countries to recognize the Ulbricht government.

He was, however, unprepared to run the risks involved in challenging allied access to the city. With 20 divisions in East Germany, he did not lack for military power, but the nuclear missiles and bombers that President Kennedy had targeted on the Soviet Union gave him pause.

If, the Soviet leader reasoned, he could slip some missiles into Cuba, he would be able to confront Mr. Kennedy on a more equal basis. His plan was to deploy the missiles in Cuba and then travel to the United Nations in New York.

There he would suggest that he and the American president settle this troublesome Berlin problem.

This does not explain why Mr. Castro went the idea that Europeans constitute a mique and superior race and civiliza-tion, it is logical to believe in the rightness of other "races" purifying themselves by going back to the sources of their own civilizations. Iran is an example of this being done, to world-shaking effect. Some European rightists even argue that Islam is a religion superior to Christianity because it is a warrior belief — "absolute monotheism, exempt from any taint of anthropomorphism or polytheism, integrating every part of existence into a ritual order," as an Italian writer describes it. A theorist of the Nouvelle Droite says, "There is not the slightest contradiction between our opposition to immigration and our desire for a closer collaboration between Europeans and Arabs." The Arabs have their destiny; Europe has its own.

The groups with the ideas Mr. Plenel describes are small. Some, though, have been mixed up in terrorism, or recommend it, and no one can deny that ideas like these could once again inspire a popular movement.

And Resolve

By Flora Lewis

PARIS — The point where laws and a sense of higher moral obji. gation conflict is an ancient human dilemma, regularly renewed. Recent examples highlight some of the differences between honorable responses and smug, self-righteons ones.

There is the case of Mathias Rust, the 19-year-old West German who flew into Moscow's Red Square. He apologized at his trial for the danger and insult he caused, explaining that he wanted to dramatize the cause of peace in what he thought would be an inoffensive though spectacular way.

His mother said he was a young man with noble ideals but without tenced him to four years in prison.

The requirements of judicial procedure have been met, and it is to be been met. hoped that mercy will now be shown by sending him home. He risked his own life, actually harming no one to call attention to his hopes. There is the case of Mordechai Vanunu, the Israeli who told a British newspaper what had long been suspected about his country's nuclear preparations. He is now standing the al in total secrecy in Jerusalem, Inga-mously, by writing on his hand and holding it to the window of a police van, he got out the message that he had been forcibly abducted. So now the windows are blacked out when he is transported through the streets and he is obliged to wear a helmet to keep him completely incommunicado.

He too violated laws to call attention to his fears, but not by espionage, stealth or betrayal. Like Mr. Rust, be sought to appeal to public opinion, trusting in people's intelligence. Israel's security interest would have been better served if its government had ignored him. He did not give away the kinds of technical secrets that could do real damage, as some American spies have done in recent years. His revelations would have been put down as another not quite confirmed report if they had not been corroborated by his kidnepping and star-chamber trial.

By wit and personal risk, not by violence or deception, both men tried to send messages to the world against war and the hatreds that others work so hard to inflame. The law is sten and they are obliged to submit, but they were not dishonorable.

There is a distinction here put with great poignancy by James Boad Stockdale in a speech he made in April. Mr. Stockdale was a vice admiral in the U.S. Naval Air Force who was shot down over North Vietnam and kept eight years in a Hanoi pris-on where he was tortured repeatedly. He survived and never gave in to his captors' demands, by maintaining what he calls "resolve.

"Resolve," he said, "is too expensive to waste on trivial things and too precious to throw away on anything you don't believe to your bones to be worthy of you. On the other hand, the things we do consider worthy of ourselves demand it."

Mr. Stockdale is convinced that such an individual standard most also be observed as a national standard if the country is to meet the trials of the world effectively. "National resolve," he said, "is too valuable, it's too hard to come by, it takes too much out of us, to commit it to any cause that is not worthy of our nation."

That is the answer to the lying, selfrighteous, self-serving brand of patriotism that Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North offered the public. It is an answer to the argument that deception, cheating, dirty tricks and double-dealing are justified when practiced seartily and illegally in the name of the nation. Mr. Stockdale was addressing himself to the lie behind the Gulf of Tonkin resolution, which launche America into the Vietnam War.

"It gave us false confidence in escalation theory and a guilty con-science," he said. "I say let us be aware that resolve and commitment and moral leverage, the only give that ties America's sons to their leaders, cannot be displaced by throw-away concepts of finesse and trickery. These are not worthy of us, and because they are not worthy of us we cannot rely on them.

The deepest human resolve is not built on self-deception, rationalization or cuteness. It has its roots in the finer elements of human beings and of their countries. Thus, resolve to stand for what is worthy of us, to live so that our own best conscien not offended. Only this will perpetuate the best of us and our inst for generations to come."

The words were spoken well before the Iran-contra hearings but might have been their peroration. It is bad to break laws. It is worse to be without conscience, for a person or a nation. The New York Times.

The Buying-Up of America: No Grounds for Panic WASHINGTON — The business investors, there may be room for furpages have been replete with stories of foreign takeovers of American firms and of the growing share of foreign ownership in U.S. real estate, most notably the rapid growth of Japanese investment in the United States. While this growth is not trivial, there is no reason to fear that the Japanese are gaining control of U.S. ustry and real estate.

Not so long ago it was U.S. invest-ment abroad that created unfounded concerns in Europe that the United States would soon dominate those economies. And within the last decade there was near panic that the OPEC countries were buying up everything in sight. In fact, U.S. investments abroad have been of great benefit to host countries. The U.S. economy can also benefit from foreign investment.

The enormous Japanese trade sur-plus has been the driving force for the growth of that country's foreign investment. Last year the Japanese invested $100 billion abroad, and about two-thirds of that came to the United States. But the overwhelming bulk of Japanese investment has been passive investment in the form of stocks and bonds. There is no danger that Japa-nese investment is enabling the Japanese to control U.S. business. Most foreign capital arrives in the form of fixed-income investments such as bonds and bank deposits.

These amount to about three-fourths of the stock of foreign investment in the United States. Portfolio invest-are direct investments in husinesses and in real estate. Yet these total only about one-sixth of foreign investment in the United States. (Investment is considered direct if it amounts to more than 10 percent of the ownership of a business or property; otherwise it is considered portfolio investment.) Japanese direct investment in real estate has been growing rapidly as Japan's trade surplus has soared and as the yen has strengthened relative to the dollar. A Salomon Brothers report estimates that the Japanese vested $4 billion in U.S. real estate last year, nearly three times the total of all past Japanese real estate investments in the country. Yet the $4 billion is minor compared with the total spending on new construction in America of more than $300 billion.

Most Japanese real estate invest-ment is concentrated on office buildings and hotels. Again, the $4 billion of Japanese investment is a small proportion of the total commercial construction of $140 billion.

The figures on Japanese direct own-ership of American businesses are sim-larly reassuring. The total value of all direct investment by Japanese busi-nesses in the United States is extremely small —about $23 billion at the end of 1986. Most of that does not involve manufacturing, but refers to wholesale trading companies that operate in the United States as an arm of the Japanese export sector. The accumula ments in corporate stocks amount to stock of Japanese manufacturing investments in America totaled only $3 billion at the end of 1986.

Although foreign direct investment in America is growing rapidly, the United States still has a far larger stock of direct investments abroad than foreigners have in America. Last year, U.S. earnings on direct invest-ments in the rest of the world were four times as great as foreign countries' earnings on their direct investments in the United States.

Far from representing an imate danger of foreign control of the American economy, the capital in-flow from abroad has helped to keep U.S. interest rates down and has thus permitted a higher overall level of investment in America. Along with the benefits of imported technology and, particularly in the case of Japanese investment, of new management techniques, there have been improvements in employment as a result.

The recent growth of Japanese equity investments may even have had something to do with the extraordinary bull market of 1987. Despite record highs, U.S. price-earnings ra-tios remain in the 15-to-20 range, while in Japan the ratios have been in the 40-to-60 range. As long as American stocks look cheap to Japanese

N EW YORK — For decades to come, American scholars will be dissecting the Iran-contra hearings that seemed so important back in the late 1980s, to find out for themselves what they told about the Reagan era.

There is a chance now for scholars, historians and journalists to examine a new kind of historical document that will have an impact on what tomorrow thinks about today. It is like being in one of those time-warp movies.

The document is the videocassette of a contemporary event of historical significance, packaged for the consumer market. These video documents will be as easily available as books; libraries will stock them and good video stores of the future certainly will have a histoly section, just as bookstores do now.

The historian or student or journalist of the near future will use them as source material, popping them into a videocassette recorder to get an on-the-spot look at yesterday. The advantage, of course, will be that the material will be firsthand, not strained through the mind of another historian or journalist. Pick any emotional controversy of the past — imagine being able to see the faces of Captain Dreyfus and his accusers - and the importance of this kind of research document becomes vivid. There is just one problem, and there are two video-documents of the Iran-contra hearings now on sale that illusfrate it: A visual record of an event can turn out to be just as spotty, biased and misleading as any print version.

The historian will have to keep his gnard as high as ever. The cassettes now being sold deal almost entirely with Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North. One is the 90-minute "Oliver North: Memo to History," produced by MPI Home Video. Its first section whips back and forth in short "bites" of Colonel North at his most pithy, confronting his enemies. It is chopped up and does neither historical nor journalistic justice to the colonel or his congressional interrogators. This section gives no idea of where a paricularly feisty passage came during the hearings, what led up to it and what was said in response.

It makes the whole document questionable as a piece of history or jour-nalism. Its value is only as an early example of something new and impor-tant, like the scratchy recordings of old radio news broadcasts.

The other cassette is the two-hour "Lientenant Colonel Oliver North: His Story." This tape, produced by Turner Home Entertainment and Forum Home Video, uses film and commentary by Cable News Network, which is owned by the Turner company. For journalists it is a humbling demonstration of how an important news organization, in haste to get something out, can go wrong; well, almost humbling. CNN generally gives complete, fast, straight news, and since it does that 24 hours a day, it is almost always being watched in newsrooms around the country. It can influence journalists' responses and decisions. That in itself gives the network importance.

On the cassette, the student of the future will first see a CNN anchorman, Bernard Shaw, standing in front of the Capitol, and hear this message:

This man from upstate New York, this man from the sweaty boxing ring at the Annapolis academy, this decorated blood-and-guts man from Vietnam where bullets tore flesh and men died. this family man of love and care, this man whose mortal enemy is con nism and aggression ... [became] the switching point for President Reagan's determined effort to help the Nicaraguan contras, the freedom fighters, 'the resistance' — as North called them."

Then follows two hours of selected testimony by Colonel North that is virtually devoid of context, questioning or contradiction. In a sense, the hearings were a trial before the public and the Congress. The CNN version is not an accounting of the trial but a statement for the defense. From a defense attorney, fine; from a news network, a distortion of the historic reality.

It is an advocacy piece of work, just as some of the newspaper and maga-zine stories that showed Colonel North as nothing but a hypocritical trickster were advocacy pieces. On the cassette, the colonel shows intelligence, a quick mind and a lust for intellectual combat. The problem is that since the CNN videocassette is a job of advocacy history, the viewer can never be certain just where reality lies. The videocassette of today will be a historian's tool tomorrow. These two versions show that the videotape can be as untrustworthy as the ballpoint pen as a recorder of history. The videocassettes are reminders to journalists and historians from way back in 1987: What counts is who is doing the recording, how they are doing it, and why. The New York Times.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Great Leap Backward?

Regarding "Sichuan's Fertile Farms Hold a Lesson for America" (Aug. 20): Neal R. Peirce sees today's American farmer as a peasant who has been un-done financially by his specialization. He depicts the smaller, self-contained farm of 50 years ago as a happy, pastoral version of what in reality was a dawn-to-dusk labor camp not only for the farmer, but for his wife and children as well. It still is, for that matter, but its productivity has risen to allow most farmers a decent standard of living. Today's American farmers do not want to try to raise families on what they can earn carrying "chickens, ducks and vegetables" to market on their backs or their bicycles. Specialization has allowed farmers to enter the 20th century. The answer to the crisis in American farming is not to share living space with farm animals or to shovel waste into bioeas pits - the answer is a fair price for the world's best agricultural products.

Yes, there is a lesson in the Chinese model; but it shows how far we have come, not where we should go. Labor-intensive agriculture in the United States is a dinosaur sent into extinction by the exodus of labor to the cities. Salvation for the American farmer is not to be found in a hoe and straw hat, Mr. Peirce's opinions may make interesting patter on the Washington cocktail circuit, but in Cresco, Iowa, he would be

Regarding the report "On Trial, Rust Says He Erred" (Sept. 3):

The Russians have convicted Mathias Rust of "violation of flight regulations" and "malicious hooliganism." Ironically, such words more aptly describe their conduct toward Korean Airlines Flight 007. The Russians simply lack the moral authority for anyone to take the Rust trial seriously. Given what they are ca-pable of doing to civilian airliners, their show of self-righteous indignation and legalism seems most misplaced. After all Mr. Rust did not use his Cosses to all, Mr. Rust did not use his Cessna to shoot down a Soviet airliner, all he did was play a spectacular aerial prank. And before anyone gets carried away by the "openness" of the Rust trial, recall how Soviet warships kept other vessels (even those carrying mourners) far from the place where the KAL flight plunged into the sea. Yet Moscow welcomed Westerners to Mr. Rust's trial, hoping their presence would lend credibility to the proceedings, and to the accusers.

Regarding the obituary of Clar-ence Brown (Aug. 20):

at all wish to and acts accordingly. It would be easy to work this subject matter into the curriculum. Standard introductory phrases, for example, could be taught in one brief session. The material is straightforward.

"As you will recall" is used when you believe the listener will not recall what you are about to say. The more forceful "you will remember that" is to be used when you are absolutely certain the listener has forgotten something. If you have to tell someone something he does not know, begin your sentence with "as you know."

When dealing with your own state of mind, it is important to master the negative. To express an uncomplimen-

By the same token, if you mean to be critical or rude, say you do not mean to be: "I don't mean to be rude." When, you are sure of something, you must. say that you are not entirely sure of the opposite; thus, if you strongly disagree, say, "I'm not entirely sure I agree."

"Not to belabor the point" is used as an introduction when you are about to, belabor a point. If the belaboring will be prolonged then, "not to prolong the mat-ter" is preferred. When you want to change a conversation's subject, always say "not to change the subject."

After covering the introductory phrases, students should be ready to tackle The Excuse. For example, they should be taught that it is quite unnec essary to admit that they cannot or will

The same technique is useful if one has not done something one should have done. There is no need to less up. Youth should be taught, as adults have learned, to imply that it is because of the excessive demands of others, with the versatile, "I haven't had a chance to."

Something Precise T HE ancient languages and their poems and plays have the singular ability to help us free ourselves from vulgarity. I do not mean "vulgar" in the Roman sense of "common." The Greeks had a more insightful word, apeirokalia, meaning the lack of experience with things that are beautiful. The Parthenon, Euripides, the perfection of each Platonic dialogue, the sound of Greek sentences — all these have the power to raise us up. It is hardly the most practical argument for studying the classics. But they can give us a sense of something precise, something noble something truly beautiful. Salve.

U.S. Aides Worry That Reagan Is Losing Control on Contras

By John M. Goshko Washington Past Service
WASHINGTON — One month

after President Ronald Reagan and the Speaker of the House, Jim Wright, announced their Central America peace initiative, many administration officials say they believe events are moving so far be-yond U.S. control that Mr. Reagan soon may find both Congress and U.S. allies in Central America no longer willing to support the Nicaraguan rebels.

These officials - many of them supporters of the rebels, known as contras - say developments in the last month threaten to undermine the contra cause despite repeated White House assurances that Mr. Reagan will fight for renewed congressional financing for the rebels unless the Sandinist government in Nicaragua cuts its ties to Cuba and the Soviet Union and permits pluralistic democracy.

In several interviews, political appointees and career officials in the State Department and other agencies said the administration had been losing the initiative to forces whose idea of a regional peace agreement differs considerably from what Mr. Reagan had in mind when he joined Mr. Wright in Their original goal was to maneuver Nicaragua into a position in which it had to agree to the terms of the Reagan-Wright plan or face the tras. possibility of renewed contra funding after Sept. 30. Unexpectedly, however, the U.S. move prodded Nicaragua, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala to propose their own, and somewhat different, peace plan.

Reagan may be unable to keep his promises to the contras if the Central American plan leads to a peace accord by its Nov. 7 deadline. The reason, these officials said, is that in the negotiations so far, the five Central American governments have shown more interest in pursuing their own national intersts than in achieving an agreement that will effectively resolve tensions throughout the region.

U.S. officials say they fear that the four democracies, to win their own ends, will demand of Nicaragua only a few cosmetic, democrameasures that can be portrayed as complying with a peace said in a speech. U.S. Congress Returns To a Mountain of Work On Contentious Issues [K. Fans

By Linda Greenhouse New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - With nearly all of the year's most difficult legislative problems unresolved, Congress returns from its monthlong summer recess Wednesday to what is shaping up as a long and chaotic fall or even winter session.

Deep differences over taxes, trade policy, arms control and Central America must be addressed, some urgently, in an atmosphere already highly charged by the ap-proach of the 1988 elections.

Even these contentious issues could be overshadowed by the battle in the Senate, which may evolve into a filibuster, over the confirmation of Judge Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court.

Congressional leaders who once planned to conclude this year's session by mid-October now say that even Thanksgiving may be an optimistic target.

"If it were up to the House alone, we could conclude by mid-Octosaid Representative Jim Wright of Texas, the House speak-But there is no realistic hope that we will do that, given the deliberate efforts by some in the Senate to keep the trains from moving on

The speaker's reference was to the Senate's Republicans, who have been able to turn the body's intricate rules to their advantage in pre-venting action on such matters as a Defense Department bill containing arms control provisions; a major campaign financing bill; and

Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, the Senate majority leader, warned in August that he might delay consideration of the Bork nomination until Republicans "come to their senses" and permit the Senate to move through its legislative agen-

Its fate there depends on how Mr. Bork emerges from the hear-

tive depicted by the White House, in which case conservative Democrats and moderate Republicans would probably vote for him, or as the extreme rightist that Mr. Biden and other opponents of the nomination say they believe him to be.

• The most urgent business before Congress is adopting a federal budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. The House has passed 9 of the 13 appropriations bills that make up the $1 trillion budget; the Senate has passed none. President Ronald Reagan has threatened to veto several of the bills. Many difficult budgetary decisions must be made in the next few weeks. The new budget, essentially a Democratic product, calls for $19.3 billion in tax increases, which have yet to be specified and which the president has said he will not accept. A compromise on the pace and means of reducing the deficit over the next few years eluded congressional negotiators on the eve of

BRUSSELS -All 530 prisoners were accounted for Tuesday, one day after inmates at Saint Gilles Prison in Brussels staged a riot lasting five hours, the Justice Ministry

A spokesman denied reports that 13 prisoners remained at large, the second rebellion in a Brussels prison in as many days. The riots at Saint Gilles and Forest prisons were in protest over alleged preferential treatment Belgium will grant to 26 Liverpool soccer fans who will soon be extradited on manslaughter charges stemming from the 1985 Heysel Stadium riots.

The police said 150 people, inchiding some policemen, were injured in Monday's rebellion, many suffering from respiratory problems due to the many fires that were lit inside the prison during noting by about 400 inmates.

eaffirmed U.S. treaty obligations. It also has endorsed the opposition movement's call for free elections and civilian control of the National Defense Forces, the nation's only military and police organization.

General Noriega's answer to his critics is a single slogan: "Not One Step Back!" Written on walls, billboards, bumper stickers and railroad cars as the theme of Monday's treaty anniversary, it affirms his letermination to stay in power to supervise the final transfer of canal

Many Panamanians harbor serious doubts about that process, a survey indicated last month.

Of 638 residents polled in Panama City, 35 percent said they thought the canal worked better a decade ago, before Panama had a role in its administration. Eleven percent said it runs better today.

The same survey showed that 45 percent believe it is "improbable" that the United States will live up to its treaty obligations, compared to 51 percent who consider it

The anti-Noriega protests began had rigged the 1984 presidential election and planned the murder of a leading opponent. General Nor-iega has denied the charges.

The pro-military National As-sembly has accused "groups of the traditional oligarchy" of leading the protests with the aim "to establish a political regime in Panama that would allow the United States to remain after the year 2000."

Ricardo Arias Calderón, leader of the Christian Democratic Party and one of those denounced as "traitors" by the assembly, said all opposition groups support the "full nationalization of the canal as an irreversible fact."

"Noriega's argument is typical of dictators who feel rejected by their own people," he said. But Dennis P. McAuliffe, the ca-

nal's U.S. administrator, admitted that the Panamanian government's campaign has been somewhat effective in shifting the focus of debate in the country by casting doubt on U.S. intentions

The treaties were signed by President Jimmy Carter and General Omar Torrijos, a populist officer who brought the military to power in 1968 and dominated Panama until his death in an airplane crash

Under the treaties, Panama was given a bigger share of shipping toll revenues, and they now account for 8 percent of the national income. But the canal's operating budget remains under U.S. congressional control until 1999, when full operational control passes to Panama. At that time, U.S. military personnel based in Panama for canal defense, now numbering 10,000, ust withdraw from the country.

BELGRADE — Windows of at least seven shops owned by people of Albanian descent were smashed overnight, apparently in retaliation for the killing of four soldiers by an ethnic Albanian last week, Radio

It said that four stores on the outskirts of Belgrade and three in Titograd, capital of Montenegro, were smashed and that there was no indication of burglary. The attacks brought to 10 the number of such incidents apparently directed against ethnic Albanians since the killings. Aziz Kelimendi, 20, from the Albanian-dominated southern province of Kosovo, shot to death four fellow soldiers Thursday and wounded five before killing himself in army barracks at Paracin, about 100 kilometers (60 miles) south of Belgrade. The army said Monday that he was motivated by Albanian nationalist sentiments.

Bonn Thanks Iran and Syria on Hostage day thanked Iran and Syria for helping to obtain the freedom of Alfred Schmidt, a West German engineer who had been kidnapped, a ministry spokesman said.

The spokesman, Michael Gerdts, said Mr. Genscher had sent a telex to the foreign ministers of Syria and Iran "personally thanking them, Syrian leader Hafez Assad and Iranian parliamentary leader Hashemi Rafsanjani for their help in gaining Schmidt's release."

LISBON - Washington's top expert on Africa made a surprise trip to Luanda on Tuesday to resume talks on independence for South-West Africa and the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola, the Angolan news agency ANGOP reported.

ANGOP, in a dispatch received in Lisbon, said Chester A. Crocker, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, arrived for unannounced talks "within the framework of contacts which had ontinued with the Angolan authorities."

After the failure of talks with Mr. Crocker in Luanda two months ago, Angola recently said it was willing to be more flexible over a pull-out of the estimated 30,000

Mr. de Jonge was released in Mozambique with Pierre-Andre Albertini of France and 133 Ango, lan soldiers in exchange for Major Wynand du Toit of the South African Army. Mr. Albertini strived a France on Tuesday.

The Dutch government denied Tuesday that it had made any code cessions to South Africa in the necotistions that led to Mr. de onge's release.

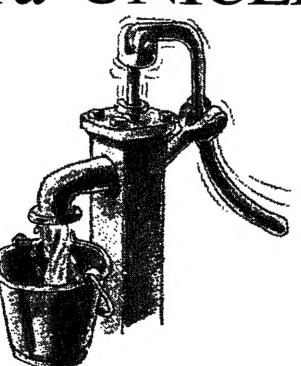

Explaining his decision to inves-tigate Mr. de Jonge's South African activities, Mr. van den Broek said: The diplomatic asylum granted to de Jonge was in no way designed to subtract him from the normal course of justice."

In Cape Town, President Pieter W. Boths waited up until the early hours of Tuesday morning to welcome home Major du Toit.

The major, only recently promoted from captain, was treated as a hero two years after he was captured deep in northern Augola and embarrassed the South African government by saying he had been sent to sabotage a U.S.-Angolan oil installation. Pretoria denied the allegation, implying that he had been forced to make the statement.

MANULA — Almost two weeks after the unsuccessful military coup, the government of President Corazon C. Aquino appears beset by disarray, with political and military leaders engaged in an unusual round of recrimination. The vice president and foreign secretary, Salvador H. Laurel, spent the weekend touring military bases and getting rousing applause by asking the soldiers in rally-style meetings, "Should President Aquino change members of the cabinet?" and "Should the president remove the communists in ers have stepped up their calls for the resignations of Mrs. Aquino's two top aides, her executive secretary, Joker P. Arroyo, and her spe-

Mr. Arroyo appeared before the House of Representatives on Tues-day to defend himself against accusations that he is anti-military and a communist. In the process he lashed out at his critics, even as he insisted that this was the time for government officials to

Mr. Arroyo defended his earlier tracterization of Colonel Honesto Isleta, the armed forces spokes-man, as "a Goebbels propagan-dist," saying, "A Goebbels is one who tells a lie. He called me a e, and I'm not a commie."

Mr. Arroyo also suggested that Mr. Laurel was overstepping his authority during his trips to the military camps on a mission to test

e sentiments of the troops.
"That the vice president saked to go to the various military camps, yes," he said. "That he was suthorized or asked to ferment dis-

The picture that has emerged in the days following the failed coup has been one of a government searching about to cast blame.

Military officials have accused Mrs. Aquino, and particularly her two aides, of ignoring military grievances and allowing widespread dissent to spread within the armed forces.

Presidential aides, on the other hand, have said that the coup at-tempt called into question the loy-alty of large segments of the mili-

The result is that far from celebrating the defeat of the fifth and most serious coup attempt, the government has once again been re-duced to the kind of internal bickering that characterized the early months of 1986.

Stephen Bill's 'Curtains': High Promise

By Sheridan Morley International Revald Tribune

posal, death certificates and furni-

LONDON — At Hampstead, Stephen Bill's "Curtains" marks the London debut of a writer of considerable promise. His play is of considerable promise. His play is a blackly funny family album that opens at the 86th birthday party of old Ida (a crotchety Gwen Nelson), who is so full of plastic bone replacements and spinal pain that she persuades one of her three daughters to kill her, a survivingly. Her persuates to kill her, a surprisingly diffi-ters to kill her, a surprisingly diffi-cult operation involving pills, plas-tic shopping bags and cushions. At this point we might be moving into an Agatha Christie whodunnit or a more macabre Joe Orton comedy, but Bill has decided instead to go his own route and explore a culiarly English ritual of backhanded euthanasia. Having laboriously killed the old lady, who alive was neglected by all but a meddlethink Swannell would like us to know that life is bloody tiresome and that marriage doesn't make it any easier. This being a thin week, however, it proved less easy to avoid in London, where Dan Goggin's musical, surely the first ever to be derived from a line of greeting cards - so it says in the program, though we are never told what the line actually was -- is now to be found at the Fortune with bookings already being taken through January.

About as funny as a flag at half mast, "Nunsense" is a memorably terrible evening in the theater con-

Honor Blackman, who also served time in the last London revival of "The Sound of Music" and must soon be eligible for some sort of Vatican absolution, leads (as the mother superior) a cast all of whom wear the clenched grins of acresses who have narrowly missed the bus-and-truck tour of "Springtime for Hitler," and what is so infinitely depressing about this shapeless, formless shambles is that not only was it virtually full on a summer Monday night but the people it was full of paused on the way out to buy the record of a breathtakingly inadequate score. "We're here with you to share with you the humor of the num." is an opening line that I still wake up screaming a week later, but I have an unholy feeling that "Nunsense" isn't going to go away quietly or quickly: Goggin is doubtless even now at work on

Sell or Donate? U.S. Tax Laws May Curb Art Gifts

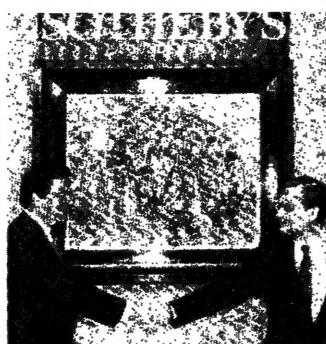

By Rita Reif

TEW YORK - The announce ment last Wednesday by a philanthropist and art dealer that he would sell Vincent van Gogh's "Irises," rather than donate the ainting to the small Maine college it has been on loan to for the last decade, is the first public evidence that the current art boom and changes in the U.S. federal tax law may result in a cutback in gifts to eums this year.

The decision by the philanthro-pist, John Whitney Payson, to consign to auction van Gogh's 1889 landscape was made, he said, after "the recent and unprecedented spiral in art prices" and the reduced benefit to donors under the 1986 Tax Reform Act necessitated a reevaluation of his art holdings.

Payson may not be alone in his decision to sell rather than donate. In interviews with auctioneers, art dealers, lawyers and museum officials since the announcement, several have said they expected donations to museums to be down this Certain shows exist primarily to. Year

Soaring values for artworks have increased insurance and security costs, he added. Two van Gogh paintings were auctioned this year at Christie's in London for extraordinary prices — "Sunflowers" Metropolitan Museum of Art, John brought £24.75 million ($39.9 million) in March and "Bridge of Trin-quetaille," £12.6 million ($20.2 mil-tax situation on donors." ion) in June.

"Irises," a ravishing, light-washed study of a field of purple flowers and one white bloom, is to be auctioned at Sotheby's Nov. 11 and is expected to sell for between $20 and $39 million, according to David Nash, who heads fine-art sales at the auction house. Nash said Payson's twofold explanation for why he was selling represented a first. Nash said most people who have consigned artworks seem mo-tivated by the increased volume in sales and the high prices achieved, not the tax consequences.

The same is true at Christie's, according to its president, Christoher Burge. "Lawyers have said 'I bet the new tax laws will help your business," he said. "But to my knowledge, not a single major work of art has come to us because of this issue. One has a faint suspicion that perhaps the real reason people are selling art is because a painting is

"And we don't have the millions of dollars in the bank to bid on the shows. So obviously, we have to compete in a different way."

Landesman plans to stake his claim by forging strong relation-ships with such resident companies as the American Repertory Thester in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and the La Jolla Playhouse in California. Those groups developed the musical "Big River," which was co-produced by Landesman and his wife, Heidi, a set designer. Through his involvement in Big River, and a shared interest in thorough bred horses, Landesman, a successful investment adviser, became friendly with the Bingers. He was also linked with a group of young new independent Broadway pro-ducers who were dissatisfied with, among other things, the trend of importing big British musicals al-most to the exclusion of homegrown theater.

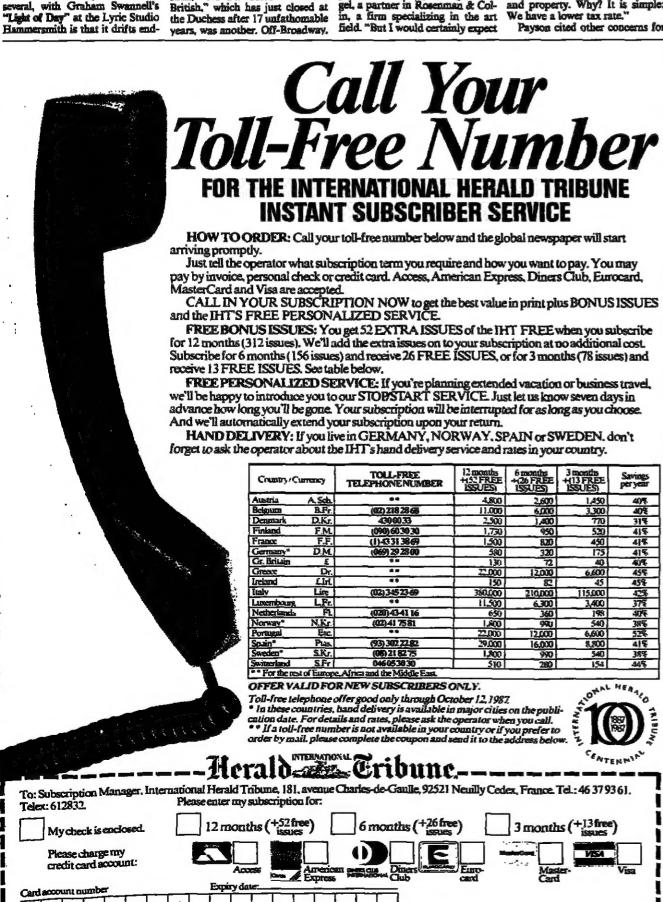

One of his first acts, even before taking office, was to hire a creative director, Jack Viertel, a former the ater critic who, for the last several years, has been dramaturg at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles. N EW YORK — Two days into his tenure as head of Jujamcyn Theaters, Rocco Landesman sank into a couch, crossed one marcon cowboy-booted foot over the other and took a deep breath. At age 40, Landesman — ruddy faced, red-haired and hirsute — is the youngest and probably the brashest president of a major Broadway theater-owning group, and he plans to do business somewhat differently from his larger competitors, the Shubert and Nederlander organiza-

Jujamcyn is owned by a Minne-apolis businessman, James H. Binger, and his wife, Virginia, and named for their children, Judy, James and Cynthia. The company comprises five theaters: the largest, with 1,600 seats, is the St. James; the Eugene O'Neill, the Martin Beck and the Virginia range from 1,100 to 1,280 seats. The Ritz is also about that size, but under the "endangered theaters" designation, only the 499 seats in the orchestra are sold when the theater is booked, thus qualifying it for lower labor

Agency Head Campaigns For Incentive Payments

By ISADORE BARMASH

EW YORK - Should advertising agencies be compensated by a commission, a fee or through an incentive arrangement? Barry Blau, chairman of Barry Blau & Partners in Fairfield, Connecticut, is for incentives. "We should be paid on what we sell for the client rather than on how much he spends on a campaign," he said. "Any businessman in his right mind would agree with that. He doesn't like the idea that, in addition to spending a lot of money on a campaign, he also pays a commission for what he hopes to sell. So an incentive setup makes sense for him and for the agency, if it can be properly worked out."

Mr. Blan admitted that incentive arrangements are feasible in his own field of direct-response advertising because the results are more directly measurable than in general advertising. Direct mail for subscriptions, for example, elicit a clear result, as do television direct-response promo-vision infections promotion and the amount of shelf space, make incentives a more difficult matter. "Nonetheless, I believe that the incentive concept can be used more widely in the advertising business," Mr. Blau insisted. "Agencies might consider a combination of a fee and some compensation as a direct result of sales, although that would require some close monitoring." Advertising agencies traditionally work for 15 percent of the billings, although negotiations with clients sometimes cut these commissions to 10 percent. Others have fee arrangements, computed on a combination of employee hours spent on the account, overhead and a markup of from 15 percent to 25 percent on both At Blan & Partners, incentive arrangements bring in only about 15 percent of the agency's revenue, but they are growing,

"We tell our clients, 'I think we could figure out an innovative form of compensation in whole or in part,' and we find more and more of them are interested." The incentive concept was praised by a fellow executive. "I think it's a very sound idea," said George Lois, the chairman chief executive and creative director at Lois Pitts Gershon. "If I had done that early in my career, I'd probably be a zillionaire

But, Mr. Lois admitted, "A lot of advertising doesn't work well enough to be able to measure results." He added: "Good advertising is another matter. It can work miracles, If my clients were willing. Pd like to try it tomorrow.'

A.C. Nielsen Co., long the dominant force in the U.S. television ratings business, now has formidable competition from the AGB National TV Ratings Service of Columbia, Maryland, a new: well-financed British-American partnership.

Starting this month, meters and monitors began clicking away in I,700 American households, reporting viewing and use data on each home's television sets and video cassette recorders for AGB

Brazil Curtails Debt Plan

Baker Calls It A 'Nonstarter'

WASHINGTON - Brazil's finance minister, Luiz Carlos Bresser Pereira, said Tuesday that the country was sharply curtailing its plan to convert about half its foreign bank debt into bonds. The decision came after the U.S. Treasury secretary, James A. Baker 3d, called the plan a "nonstarter."

Foreign banks had already criti-cized the proposal under which about half of the $69 billion owed to the banks would be converted into boods to be sold at a sharp discount from their face value. Mr. Bresser Pereira said he was now asking individual banks to accept the proposal on a purely voluntary basis, and that Mr. Baker had agreed with this approach.

Following the morning meeting between the two men, "there was general agreement that Brazil's problems should be addressed in a conventional way," a statement from Mr. Baker said.

Amid discussion of options for Brazil's bank financing package, it added, Mr. Baker "characterized Brazil's recently reported debt pro-posal to securitize existing debt as a

Brazil, the developing world's largest debtor with $112 billion owed abroad, had suggested that banks could sell the bonds at discounts of around 70 to 75 percent of their face value. The bonds would pay interest, giving banks a return similar to what they now get by trading Brazil's loans at a 55 percent discount.

Earlier this year, when Brazil stopped paying interest on its bank debt, its bank creditors increased reserves against possible loan losses. But, they said, the Brazilian plan would have forced them to actually write off much of the

The Baker statement also noted that Brazil would need to reach an agreement with the International onetary Fund on restructuring its economy before approaching Western creditor governments for debt payment delays.

The group led by Mr. Heyman, who won control of GAF in 1983 following a bitter proxy fight to oust the former chairman, Jesse Werner, offered to pay $64 in cash and securities with a face value of $2.50 for each of GAFs 33.5 million common shares outstanding.

That would give the offer for GAF, which makes chemicals and building materials, an indicated value of about $2.23 billion, the company said.

Mr. Heyman said, "We believe that the proposed transaction provides a very attractive opportunity for shareholders to realize the value of their ownership in GAF." Mr. Heyman holds more than 2,7 million shares of GAF, represent-ing about 8 percent of the outstanding stock. The proposed transaction offers um of more than 80 percent to the closing price of the company's stock on Dec. 31, 1986, and a

Oil Prices Fall 40 Cents Amid Surplus Supplies The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Oil price dropped about 40 cents a barrel Tuesday, falling below $19 for the first time in nearly two weeks, with market participants convinced that world supplies are outstripping demand.
On the New York Mercantik

Exchange, which was closed Monday for the Labor Day holiday, contracts for October delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed at $18.94 a barrel, down 38 cents from Friday.

The International Energy Agency said in Paris on Monday that August production by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries totaled 19.7 million barrels daily.

The figure, in line with other estimates, is 3.1 million barrels more than OPEC's official quota and about 3 million barrels more than market needs, according to some analysts.

United Press International disc trade deficit in July would push the dollar NEW YORK — Prices on the New York into another decline. The trade deficit report is Stock Exchange posted widespread losses Tuesdue Friday. day as rising interest rates spurred nervous investors to lock in some of the huge profits produced by the bull market. But prices finished well above the day's lowest levels. The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 77.97 last week and 70.15 the week before, dropped 16.26 to 2,545.12. Earlier in the session, the Dow was down about 62 points. The blue-chip barometer has fallen 177 points since reaching a high of 2,722.42 on Aug. 25. Declines swamped advances by a 13-2 ratio. Volume amounted to 242.88 million shares, up from 129.07 million Friday before the holi-day weekend. But about one-sixth of that activi-ty was due to trading in Pacific Gas & Electric, which starts trading ex-dividend Wednesday. Broader market indexes fell. The New York Stock Exchange index lost 1.99 to 175.59. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index skidded 3.14 to 313.56. The price of an average share fell 47

Traders said that weak bond prices, futures-linked selling and the desire to cash in on paper profits amid persistent worries about higher interest rates and the dollar's stability contributed to the market's losses. "We had a lot of sell programs from the moment the market opened," said Monte Gordon, research director at Dreyfus Corp. "The market is uncomfortable.

Daihatsu Seeks Niche In Crowded U.S. Market Carmaker Cites Strategic Necessity

By John Holusha New York Times Service

LOS ALAMITOS, California — "What is a Daihatsu Charade?" said C.R. Brown, repeating a question put to him. "We say it is the name of your next new car.

Maybe. Daihatsu Motor Co. Ltd. is the ninth and last of the Japanese automobile companies seeking a piece of the U.S. market. But its lone initial model, the Charade, is a four-seat subcompact with an odd name and an undefined image in a market filled with small cars bearing the names of established companies.

And more cars are arriving steadily from countries without the currency problems of Japan, whose strong yen, compared with the dollar, has made its products more expensive in the United States. In addition, the company has been granted a minuscule 1987 export quota of only 11,498 cars by the Japanese government, which has voluntarily limited car shipments to the United States. Daihatsu has no assurances that its allocation will be increased in the future. Mr. Brown, executive vice president and chief operating officer of Daihatsu America Inc., says that the move into the United States is a strategic necessity. Daihatsu officials believe their company must operate in all of the major automotive markets as a hedge against a sharp downturn in any single region, he said.

Mr. Brown believes the Charade can fill a niche in the U.S. smallcar field. With new products to come in future years, including a small four-wheel-drive vehicle similar to the popular Suzuki Samurai, four-wheel-drive vehicle similar to the popular Suzuki Samurai, Daihatsu plans to build a nationwide network of 750 dealers. So far, it has had no trouble finding dealers willing to sell its cars and expects to have 130 signed up by Dec. 1, when the Charade will go on sale in nine Western and Southwestern states.

Despite the Charade's small size — 12 feet (3.6 meters) long, about the same as the Chevrolet Sprint made by the Suzuki Motors Corp. — and three-cylinder engine, it will not be positioned against such very low-priced models as the Yugo from Yugoslavia and the Hyundai Excel from Kores.

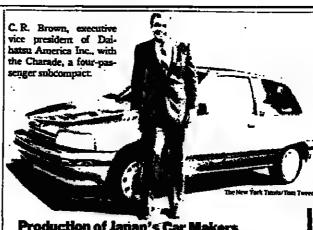

Instead, it will be introduced as a "high-line, entry-level car" with three equipment and trim levels in the $6,000-to-$10,000 price range, It will get more than 40 miles per gallon (16.8 kilometers per liter) in combined city and highway driving. Daihatsu officials predict.

The car is sold around the world under the Charade name — an intentional play on the English word. "The idea is that even though it is a small car, it doesn't feel small when you are inside it," said Joshua Ryan, a Daihatsu America official. "It's a charade of a roomy, Mr. Brown added: "It's a car where you can move down in size from a larger, more expensive our without sacrificing your pride of ownership and creature comforts. We think that is an open niche. We don't think anyone else is there now." If the Charade and subsequent models are well received in the West and Southwest, regions that traditionally have been most hospitable to new imported models, Daihatsu plans to expand around the country in a counterclockwise direction, adding the Gulf States, then the mid-Atlantic region, the Northeastern states, the Middle West and finally the Northwest.

Production of Japan's Car Makers

Daihatsu is already selling some vehicles in the United States, though it has had a low profile. It markets under its own name the Hijet, a small utility vehicle used in industrial and agricultural applications, and it supplies a small van sold here by Toyota.

Toyota owns 14.8 percent of Daihatsu and lists the smaller compary among its affiliates. Hyundai of Korea has proved that it is still possible for a newcomen to make it in America: its Excel, which was introduced last year, is one of the best-selling cars in the country. But with the General Motors Corp. and the Ford Motor Co. also bringing in similar small cars from South Korea and Mexico, some question whether Daihatsu will be able to establish a distinct image and repeat the success of Hyundai. "That's becoming an incredibly tight market," said Thomas O'Grady of Integrated Automotive Resources, a market research company. "The Japanese typically try to establish themselves in a market and worry about profits later, but Daihatsu is going to have a tough time getting their foot in the door."

Officials of GM's Chevrolet division recently estimated that there are more than 400 automotive nameplates (such as Chevrolet Camaro) on sale in the United States and predicted that a shakeout is

Pickens Begins Offer For Newmont

United Press Internation

DALLAS — Ivanhoe Partners, a group led by T. Boone Pickens, began Tuesday a $95-a-share cash Mining tender offer for Newmont Mining Corp., strengthening its own earlier $5.68 billion bid for the New York gold, coal and energy company.

Ivanhoe already has a 9.95 percent stake in Newmont. The tender offer is for 28 million common shares at $95 a share or about $2.66 billion. If all the stocks are tendered, the Pickens group would own 34.6 million shares of Newmont, out of the 66 million out-closed up $.875 at $90.25 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The tender offer is set to expire at midnight Oct. 5 unless extended.

An Ivanhoe statement said the partners had committed $600 million in cash to the offer.

Analysts said the tender offer was an attempt by the Pickens' group to preempt a counterpropos-al by Consolidated Gold Fields PLC, which owns 26.2 percent of Newmont. The tender offer also was seen as a ploy to reduce the adverse impact arising from a rejection of the buyout offer.

Consolidated could make the acuisition more difficult and costly for Mr. Pickens by raising its stake in Newmont. However, the London company thus far has made no Newmont has several options to frustrate Pickens, analysts say. The company could start buying into Mr. Pickens's Mesa Limited Partnership as a counterthreat.

Or it could distribute the gold shares to its shareholders as dividends, thereby stripping the company of its gold assets. This would also cause Newmont's stocks to plunge and cut into Mr. Pickens's profits.

BTR to Acquire Stewart-Warner

. LONDON - BTR PLC, a British industrial holding company, taid Tuesday it had agreed to acquire Stewart-Warner Corp., a U.S.-based manufacturing conglomerate, for about $220 million. John C. Cahill, managing direcfor of BTR, said the agreement was the result of a friendly approach to Warner's board. BTR's takeover would add some $300 million in sales to its U.S. operations, which are expected to erate revenues of $1.2 billion in 1987, Mr. Cahill said.

fighting to defeat a sweetened $35 a-share offer by Mr. Sosnoff. Last month, the New Jersey Casino Control Commission rejected the recapitalization, saying it was an "improdent, risky" strategy.

Caesars said Monday it would pay a single price for each of the 11 million shares it is prepared to buy. The price will be set by a computation based on the number of shares tendered and the prices specified finance the repurchase with a new debt offering and other borrowing

Mr. Sosnoff said last week he had contacted Caesars and exwhich was withdrawn in June. He said Caesars had not responded.

Central Banks Back Technical EMS Changes

BASEL, Switzerland - En-

ropean Community central bank governors have agreed to significant technical changes in the European Monetary System to avoid the acrimony that marked the last realignment of currencies, the governor of the Bank of Italy said Tuesday.

Carlo Ciampi said that the officials unanimously agreed on the changes, but he refused to provide details. He said that the accord covered the EMS's exchange rate mechanism only and did not address multicurrency intervention, a major point of contention between France and West Germany. But he said that topic would be considered later.

The report was commis sioned after France and West Germany criticized each other's tactics during a realignment of the eight EMS currencies in

Move by U.S. Fed Unlikely to Change Bonn's Credit Policy

FRANKFURT - The half-point increase in the U.S. Federal Reserve's discount rate last week has increased pressure for similar Bundesbank action to curb West German inflation.

money market analysts said Tuesday. However, concern about a dollar collapse and a sluggish economy should ensure that the Bundesbank, West Germany's central bank, does not after its credit policy at its regular council meeting on Thursday.

The official discount and Lombard rates should thus be left at 3 and 5 percent respecively, and the key short-term call money rate is fikely to hold in a range of 3.6 to 3.9 percent.

"The Bundesbank is in a dilemma," said Dieter Wermuth, head of portfolio management and research at Manufacturers Hanover

July but were 0.8 percent higher than in July Helmit Schlesinger, vice president of the Bundesbank, said last week that consumer prices would show a 1.5 to 2 percent increase over last year by the end of 1987. "That is a little more than we would wish for," he said, "but it is a result which could almost be called stability."

While it might be tempting to nudge interest rates higher and halt inflation pressures, analysts warned that such tactics could backfire as they did in January when the Bundesbank ended up lowering its discount rate to 3 percent.

Italy's GDP Up Annual 2.2%.

But Growth Is Slackening

Compiled by Ow Staff From Dispatches
ROME — Italy said Tuesday that its gross domestic product rose 2.2 percent in the second quarter from the comparable latalian economy remains one of the fastest-growing in a generally sluggish Europe.

However, the rise, adjusted for seasonal factors and calculated using 1980 prices, was below the year-on-year increase in the first quarter of 2.8 percent, according to the figures released by the national statistics institute ISTAT.

Many economists expect Italy's gross domestic product, a nation's output of goods and services excluding foreign earnings, to reach 3 percent this year, after 2.7 percent last year. Britain, where second-quarter GDP was the fourth quarter of 1986. The first-quarter increase was onigreater growth.

WHATEVER HAPPENED TO GLOOMY GUS OF THE CHICAGO BEARS?

By Robert Coover. 154 pages. $16.95. Linden Press-Simon & Schuster, 1230 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N. Y. 10020. Reviewed by Michiko Kakutani

I N his huge, controversial novel "The Public Burning." published in 1977, Robert Coover introduced a fictional character named Richard Nixon — a pathetic, but oddly sympathetic. figure, by turns sentimental and mali-cious, self-righteous and paranoid. Coover's latest novel, "Whatever Happened to Gloomy Gus of the Chicago Bears" is set in the 1930s, rather than the '50s, but it stands as a book end of sorts to "The Public Burning," and it features a hero who's a twin brother to the Nixon of that earlier novel. Like Nixon, Gloomy Gus is nicknamed "Iron Butt." Like Nixon, he hails from Whittier, California. And like Nixon, he's an odd combination of awkwardness and ambition, a true believer in the all-American precepts of hard work and perse-More than anything, Gus wants to succeed at playing football and seducing women, but he finds himself incapable of making progress without hours and hours of drill. Just as Nixon had to practice smiling, so must Gus practice all the appropriate moves. He learns how to "tackle and block swear vehemently, break out of a huddle, cradle a ball, throw it and catch it and inflate it, how to squeeze hands, caress them, gaze deeply, joke casually, wink, blow loose wisps of hair back, ask for a phone number, stand tall, and even foxtrot a bit.

For a while, all this practice pays off: For one season Gus is "the greatest halfback in football" and a world-class gigolo, with dozens of women on his dance card. Unfortunately, Gus is less a human being now than a welloiled machine; and when "the intricate mechanism comes unglued - instead of a machine, all that's left is a bag of busted-up junk." Gus humiliates himself on the football field, has a run-in with the police and is packed off to a madhouse. In time, he's partially rehabilitated and he stumbles, more or less by accident, into a group of union organizers. In the end, he becomes the 11th fatality in a confrontation with the police at a labor demonstration.

Despite this novel's obvious corollaries to "Gloomy Gus" is a small, modest novel, meticulously constructed. Where "The Public Burnmoisy world of union organizers. The biggest difference, however, lies in the book's tone. Where "The Public Burning" was suffused with anger and violence, "Gloomy Gus" has a softer, even melancholy mood.

On Wednesday, England plays West Germany in Düssel-dorf. The same day, 26 English-men may be extradited to stand mal in Belgium for the mass fighting that caused such loss of life at Heysel Stadium in Brus-

Crowd trouble would jeopardize English participation in next Parking in West Germany, and mash any return of English cinbs to Europe.

One 19-year-old Chelses fan has organized a cut-rate excur-sion to Düsseldorf, Our democracy is such that we have known for two weeks about Gawain Beste's junket, and have no power to stop him.

Beste hired a 53-seat bus and offered a three-day package for under £50 ($83). "This," he in-sists "is supposed to be a free country. My bookings are from insurance brokers, people with pretty posh accents."

We must hope that Wednes-day's sport grabs the headlines. West Germany and England may not top the artistry league, yet few teams are more competitive, more demanding on nerve and sinew - more combative, if I dare use the word.

Franz Beckenbaner needs the contest to test the side he is reshaping after dispensing with all but three of his 1986 World Cup. runners-up. Gone are Rummen-igge, Briegel and Schumacher, red are Lother Matthens and Uwe Rahn, but England will be sorely tried by the speed and opportunism of Rudi Völler and Klazs Allofs.

It is ironic that, for a friendly, West Germany has obtained their release from Roma and Marseille, and that England has Gary Lineker and Hoddle from Wales has no such luck. Its slender chance to qualify for the European championship rests on beating Denmark in Cardiff on Wednesday. It has failed to persuade Juventus to allow Ian Rush to play.

Rush claims he is perfectly fit Juventus disagrees, and UEFA rules that the verdict of the Jurentus doctor is final. Quite right too, but it will be interesting to see if Rush fails to make Juventus's league opener this Sunday.

Welch suspicions are com-pounded because the other Juventus goal-scorer, Michael Laudrup, plays for Denmark against Wales despite a recent injury.

The Danes need his cutting edge. Not for a year has Den mark reproduced its thrilling World Cup form, and Preben Elkjaer, the most explosive of forwards on his day, comments: We have looked like a bunch of little lost boys who couldn't find our way to school."

By all accounts, Danish fluency in approach has foundered on rofligate finishing. No one knows that frustration like

Her European championship is almost history now. Defeat in the Soviet Union on Wednesday will finish the French - just as they reckon they've unearthed a true center-forward:

Auxerre's Eric Cantona has emerged, according to Henri Mi-chel, the national team's manager, as "the goal-scorer France has been looking for."

Too late. Time has overlapped Platini, Giresse and Tigana; gode are the cavaliers whose gifts might have served the prodigy. The Soviets, having won comfortably in Paris last fall, will surely complete the kill - strictly in the sporting sense, we trust.

What the Big Boys Do

By Russell Baker N EW YORK — In Trenton I ran into Sandusky, who had been my next-door neighbor in Greenwich Village. "I'm living here is what I'm doing here," he said when I asked because I was surprised to find him in Jersey, Sandusky being my idea of the quintes-sential New Yorker.

That is, a man who, if you said "quintessential" to him, would try to bet it at OTB. "When you leave New York, everyplace else is Bridgeport," he always said. Now: "Living in Trenton, Sandusky? You're working an angle." Angle-working was what had got him to Trenton, he said. Back in Abingdon Square one day, brooding over the increasing expense of New York life, he plucked some trash from the air and read about the Yankees threatening to get out of town unless the city did something nice for them.

That brought it all together in my mind," Sandusky said, "I re-membered I'd been reading stories like this for months, maybe years." He remembered Wall Street. which had threatened to move to New Jersey rather than pay yet another New York tax even though Wall Street was rolling-in-money rich. That new tax, or whatever it was, hadn't been clamped onto Wall Street either, had it? Then he recalled NBC threatening to move to New Jersey unless Donald Trump got a big sweet money break from the city for building NBC a new place uptown. "And everybody getting richer but me, Sandusky, who can only get poorer and poorer because it looks like Sandusky is soon going to be the last guy in New York who isn't getting excused from taxes,"

I could guess what happened. "So you threatened to move over to Jersey unless City Hall gave you a break." I said.

They were amazed at City Hall when I issued the threat," Sandus-

Apparently they were also touched by Sandusky's brass, for each payroller to whom he issued his threat called on a higher-up boss to come look at a relic of old New York; to wit, a New Yorker who refused to grin and bear it as indignities poured upon him.
"My fodda was like you," one city worker told Sandusky. "Had nerve, y'know. Gall, chutzpah. Got up on his hind legs and screamed when people tried pushin' him around, Real old-time New Yorker. They don't make New Yorkers like my fodda anymore. New Yorkers nowadays, you dump on them, they just smile and say, 'Ain't it great to be livin' here where you can get dumped on day and Anyhow, Sandusky was such a singular figure at City Hall that somebody thought the mayor would be amused to look at him.

"So you're going to move out of New York and go to Jersey," said the mayor. "And just because the landlord is raising your rent and your boss isn't raising your pay and the city just discovered three new taxes you should have been paying the last 10 years but didn't because nobody knew they existed, so now we're also soaking you for lines and "Mayor," said Sandusky, "it's no use trying to double-talk me. I'll give it to you straight from the shoulder: New York had better make it financially possible for Sandusky to remain in Greenwich Village, or Sandusky is moving to Jersey.

The mayor asked a man who wasn't under indictment to look up Sandusky's holdings. Except for a traditional claim to the right to sit on a well-located set of sandstone steps on West Fourth Street in pleasant weather, Sandusky was not a significant New York power.

And so the mayor, who is a sentimental man but one who must nevertheless deal with realities, said, "I'm afraid, Sandusky, that New York must let you move to Jersey." Since most of north Jersey was already occupied by well-heeled New Yorkers, Sandusky couldn't locate any closer than Trenton. "All those money people rushed over and bought up Jersey from Hoboken to Secaucus, planning to make real-estate killings when NBC comes over," he said, "but they're kidding themselves. New York's never going to let the big ones get away. "Why not?" "You think the mayor's going to put up with a limousine trip to Secaucus every time they invite him on the 'Today' show?'

The Extractor, the Collector and Beckett

By Carlton Lake

JAKE SCHWARTZ was a dentist who practiced in Brooklyn in the 1920s. He had always had a romantic attachment to books and one day he decided he'd had his attachment to books and the exploratory skirmishes else-where he established himself in Bloomsbury, opposite the British Museum, as the "The Ulysses Bookshop."

Jake had good taste in literature and a nose for trends. He also had a good head for the rare book business, which is how he became a kind of literary matchmaker who brought to the altar a Pennsylvania brick manufacturer, the University of Texas and Samuel Beckett, a three-way marriage in which everyone grew richer - except Beckett.

The Ulysses Bookshop eventually gave up the ghost. Jake had a wartime fling with the theater in Hollywood, but he was never far from the rare book and manuscript trail, spending most of his time scouting in England and in France. My first encounter with Jake — by proxy — was in the late 1940s at an auction at the Parke-Bernet galleries. Among other things, I had bought a letter by Paul Verlaine that day and when I left the saleroom, a nondescript little man in loose-fitting clothes followed me. As I think back on him now, he might have stepped out of one of Samuel Beckett's novels. He grabbed my arm, introduced himself and handed me a business card, all in one movement. It took me a minute or so to realize that although the card said "Dr. Jacob Schwartz," this man wasn't Jake, but his brother David, who was Jake's legman, bundle boy, accountant and general United States representative, I learned from David that Jake was the previous owner of the Verlaine letter I had just bought. It wasn't long before I began receiving letters from Jake, sometimes from an address in Paris just across the street from the little hotel on the Rue de l'Université where Joyce had stayed; later, from London and Brighton on stationery imprinted "Dr. Schwartz / First Editions & Manuscripts of Esteemed Authors." His letters boiled down to something not much more subtle than: "If you've got the money, I've got the stuff."

From almost the beginning of Jake's book-dealing, one of his principal customers had been a man named T.E. Hanley, of Bradford, Pennsylvania. Ed Hanley was a brick manufacturer, also into oil and gas, who had once been bitten by a rare book and had never recovered. Dealers knew he couldn't resist anything good and during the Depression and the postwar pre-inflation lean years they sed him to buy whatever they could get their hands on. If he was short of cash, they let him pay in installments; he often was and did. Jake fed to Hanley nearly everything good that came his way. Hanley made monthly payments and whenever he could scrape up some uncommitted cash, he would send Jake an additional check. But Hanley's umpaid balance kept mounting. It reached $20,000, $40,000, $60,000, $80,000 — and these were 1953 dollars.

In the summer of 1956, Jake began writing to Hanley in characteristically enticing and hyperbolic style about his "Beckett Collection" and artfully described it in a pamphlet he entitled "A Collection of Manuscripts and Au-thors Association Material of Samuel Beckett." Jake had 80 copies printed "for Private Circulation . . . for Students and Collectors" but really for Hanley. "The writings of Beckett," it said, "belong to no school: they will make one." Of Beckett's unpublished play "Eleutheria" — in Jake's translation, "Mad Zeal for Freedom" - Jake wrote, "His rejections are superior to other dramatists' dream of perfection." Of Beckett's first book, "Whoros-

cope," he wrote: "Two mental operations which interest

Mr. Beckett are philosophy and hunacy. By now, Hanley was so heavily in hock to Jake that he didn't swallow the bait at once but wrote him: "Should you still have the Beckett Collection in another two to three months, I will let you know if I can handle" it Jake kept the needle in and before long Hanley's resistance collapsed. He rationalized his capitulation by referring to the "Beckett Collection" as an "outside transaction."

But how did Jake manage to get all these Beckett treasures? Well, Beckett had no notion of their potential market value and he found it useful to have a little extra money. Jake, on the other hand, was an expert at separating people from things of that kind - and, as the French put it, under the best conditions. As a former dentist it was only natural that sooner or later he should come to be known as "The Great Extractor"; known also, as Beckett once told me wryly, "for his sparing use of anesthetic."
In a letter to Nancy Cunard in May 1956, Beckett wrote,

"Doc S. extracted from me £200 worth of mss and 30 Bones at 5 [shillings] apiece. . . . I liked him well enough — an entertaining ruffian." Ten days later he wrote her: The G[reat] E[xtractor] keeps sending me presents and books. Very generous." Jake sent him a tin of his favorite tea. He sent him a set of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, from which one volume was missing. Beckett responded by sending Jake little gifts. In January 1957, he wrote to Jake, "I have found the typescript of [the play] 'All That Fail'. . . . You are welcome to it if it interests you." Naturally it did and so Beckett sent it to him. Later that year Beckett sent him the corrected typescript of "Act Without Words." When Jake offered to pay £10 for it, inscribed copies, original manuscripts, corrected type-alone £10. And you're very welcome to it."

And so Jake Schwartz kept pressing Beckett for more scripts and, occasionally, transcriptions of manuscripts. Beckett wrote to Nancy Cunard: "Schwartz is becoming rather a nuisance, soon he will be sending me his toiletpaper to inscribe."

Beckett protested: "But it's not worth 10 [shillings] let

After a short, unhappy marriage, Ed Hanley had remained a bachelor well into middle age. He lived alone, looked after by an elderly English housekeeper he had inherited from his father. As for women, it was a case of once burned, twice shy. But in 1945, in a Buffalo night-club, he had caught the act of an exotic dancer named Tullah. Tullah was half Egyptian, half Hungarian and half Ed Hanley's age. Ed sat through two of her performances that night, then commissioned an artist friend to paint Tullah's portrait. In due course he proposed, and since Tullah's main aim in life had always been, as she freely admitted, to marry a millionaire, she accepted. They were married, and Ed took Tullah back to Bradford, along with her beautiful young sister and former dancing partner, Amy. The three got along famously.

But Ed's primary passion centered around his books and manuscripts and he continued to buy. Well before the end of 1958, his debt to Schwartz -- in spite of the regular monthly payments — was more than $128,000. He had taken out bank loans from time to time and borrowed money from his long-suffering sister and from the family business, but he just couldn't stop buying. Also, he was beginning to worry about the safety of his collections. They had taken over every room in his house, as well as the stairways, the attic, the basement - even the garage. One day the insurance company came to inspect the premises. They told Ed they would insure him no longer; the place was a firetrap. Under pressure from Tullah and Amy, Ed made a seven-figure deal in 1958 with the University of Texas. His collections began moving in large installments, from Bradford to Austin, and the Humanities Research Center acquired one of the world's largest - 155,000 pieces - and finest private libraries of modern British and American books and manuscripts. Of course, no real collector ever stops collecting, and once the decks were cleared by the big sale to Texas, Hanley kept right on, with the result that by midsummer of 1961, his new tab with Jake ran to more than $182,000. Finally Tullah convinced Ed that he had to stop buying and the liquidation procedure began all over.

And that was the beginning of our Samuel Beckett collection, which now includes — along with most of the major correspondences and many of the minor ones, and all of the books in their most desirable states - more than 50 autograph manuscripts and corrected typescripts, to-taling well over 5,000 pages. At the heart of this group are Hanley's manuscripts; however, they are not alone. In the 22 years since then, one other collector in Hanley's class has shown his face in Texas. And through him, as luck would have it, Sam Beckett himself, a warmhearted and erous man, has donated other manuscripts and other books to add further luster to our Schwartz-Hanley golden windfall. But that's another story, one of the kind that makes life in Texas rich indeed, whatever the price of oil.

Carlion Lake, executive curator of the Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas, has just completed a memoir, "Confessions of a Literary Archeologist." He wrote this article for The New York Times Book Review.

Princeton University says that actress Brooke Shields got a solid education and overfulfilled the requirements for her major, even though she did not take any courses in mathematics and the hard sciences. University spokesman Jastin Harmon said Shields went beyond requirements for her major, taking classes in French language and literature. Shields's college record has come under scrutiny since Life magazine printed a copy of her transcript, showing she was strong transcript, showing she was strong on language courses but short on subjects like math and science.

Critics have since argued that Princeton should require all students to have a strong background in math and science.
